MIRACLE IN THE CONTEMPORARY THEOLOGY

SUMMARY

The article, while trying to avoid any strait apologetic approach to the religious problem of miracle, considers it in the theological perspective. The theological interpretation seems to be necessary, as those aspects of the Judeo-Christian revelation that make it believable need to be integrated into a broader and deeper outlook, into a broader epistemological and religious framework for its proper understanding. The article consists of the following parts: "Voices of Dictionary", "Miracle as the Definitive Criterion of Revelation", "Miracle and its Dimensions", "Miracles as the Credibility of Faith", "Miracles, Christology, Liberation", "Functions of Miracle".

KEYWORDS: miracle, religious faith, Christian theology, Roman-Catholic Church.
